Class Curriculum

A five day (36 hour) training program designed for law enforcement investigators, narcotics investigators and officers who participate in high-risk operations used to apprehend violent subjects involved in the illicit narcotics trade. Many narcotics and tactical street crime units serve their own search warrants with little or no training. Investigators will learn various methods used to safely conduct reverse sting operations, buy/bust operations and investigative techniques used to successfully conduct narcotics related cases. Instructors will cover how to plan operations and how to conduct proper planning and scouting for raids and tactical operations. The curriculum will include Tactical Narcotics Techniques, which details how to conduct short term operations used to infiltrate and target high priority area's where narcotics and prostitution are presenting problems. Instructors will cover hands on tactical vehicle assaults, high risk vehicle stops, high risk search warrant entries, and various tactical theories used to safely clear rooms and buildings. The curriculum covers various approaches used to successfully conduct consent searches on residences, hotels and businesses. Students will participate in undercover practical exercises involving the use of role players during the training. This is a scenario based training course that will require PHYSICAL PARTICIPATION in the various scenarios and techniques being taught. Students will be placed in situations that will involve the use of role players during the practical exercises. Tactical case studies will be presented to show both correct and incorrect ways to prepare for tactical operations. This class offers insight for both new and veteran investigators as well as investigators who participate in task forces that involve multi-agencies. Narcotics investigations are high liability units that require proper training for the safety of the officers and citizens. Don't miss this training opportunity!
