The job of chief is often rigorous and demanding. There are many decisions and considerations that you must make daily that impact the lives of the members of your agency. In the evolving world of policing, this can be a difficult task.

The SAFLEO Program, supported by the Bureau of Justice Assistance, recognizes that every law enforcement chief executive in the nation is concerned about the mental and physical wellness needs of his or her officers. SAFLEO provides training and resources to law enforcement agencies, officers, and their families on the most compelling stressors that impact them and, more important, where and how to seek assistance when necessary.

This presentation will:

- Feature current and retired chiefs who will discuss the journey to chief, the cumulative impacts of stress, wellness tools, and questions that many chiefs have faced or will face during their careers.

This project was supported by Grant 2018-V1-BX-K003 awarded by the Bureau of Justice Assistance. The Bureau of Justice Assistance is a component of the U.S. Department of Justice's Office of Justice Programs, which also includes the Bureau of Justice Statistics, the National Institute of Justice, the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, the Office for Victims of Crime, and the Office of Sex Offender Sentencing, Monitoring, Apprehending, Registering, and Tracking (SMART).
